

Versione italiana

A public meeting, promoted by the people who created the “Mai indifferenti. Jewish voices for peace” are promoting a public meeting, to provide an opportunity to think together about what is happening in Gaza, the West Bank and Israel, and what can be done in the face of the increasingly dramatic situation.

We are not a group that speaks with one voice, but rather a network of people who feel united in the need to break away from the apparent unity of the Italian Jewish community and the simplified use of certain terms.

We wanted to break the silence with our appeal.

‘Anti-Semitism’, ‘Zionism’, ‘genocide’ and other terms have become weapons that confuse and divide, often inappropriately.

In the context of a difficult, sometimes impossible, public debate, we feel the need not to stop on the threshold of words, but to try to analyze them with a view to breaking the language of hatred, war and dehumanization that is spreading on all sides.

The meeting includes an initial presentation of the appeal by some of the promoters (Jardena Tedeschi, Renata Sarfati, Eva Schwarzwald) and in-person speeches by Stefano Levi Della Torre, Gad Lerner, Silvia Vegetti Finzi, Federico Sinicato and David Calef; others will connect remotely.
